At TPI, our mission is to cover companies whose main business is patent licensing and infringement litigation. Our weekly research focuses on earnings, litigation wins and losses, capital raising, executive changes and patent reform legislation, things few Wall Street analysts have the commitment to cover.

We also focus our coverage on the finances of investment managers and companies with significant investments in intellectual property across all industries including automotive, biotech, computer hardware and software, pharmaceuticals, telecommunications and technology.

TPI is focused like a laser beam on analyzing developments in the patent market and correctly calling the next bull market, which our reporting suggests could start in 2017 if optimism in the new administration of President-elect Trump proves justified. If you want to have a head start on the next big opportunity, you need to subscribe to TPI.

Our subscribers include numerous law firms, including Sterne Kessler Goldstein & Fox LLP, Polsinelli LLP, Skadden Arps Slate Meagher & Flom LLP, Farney Daniels PC, Wiley Rein LLP, Sughrue Mion PLLC.

Corporate and individual subscribers include Ericsson, Qualcomm, Xerox, Technicolor, InterDigital, WiLAN, Marathon Patent Group, Techquity Capital Management, IPValue, Altitude Capital Partners, Fortress Investment Group and many others.

TPI has been endorsed by the following patent market leaders:

“The Patent Investor provides daily and weekly investigative reporting on companies monetizing patents, the detail and quality of which is not found at any other news source.”

— Phil Hartstein, CEO of Finjan Inc.

“The Patent Investor is a must read for NPEs and corporations to sense the financial implications for what's transpiring in this complex asset class.”

— Rob Kramer, managing partner of Altitude Capital Partners
